PLACES TO VISIT WHILE IN ALBUQUERQUE

Old Town - Northeast of Central Ave and Rio Grande Blvd. NW

Old Town is a maze of cobbled courtyard walkways leading to hidden patios and gardens where many of Old Town's 150 galleries and shops are located. Adobe buildings, many refurbished in the Pueblo Revival style of the 1950s are grouped around the Plaza, created in 1780. Pueblo and Navajo artisans often display their pottery, blankets and silver jewelry outside the building along the eastern side of the Plaza.

The buildings of Old Town once served as mercantile shops, grocery stores, and government offices, but the importance of Old Town as Albuquerque's commercial center declined after 1880 when the railroad came through a little more than a mile east of the Plaza and the businesses relocated to be closer to the trains. When Albuquerque was established in 1706, the first building erected by the settlers was the Church of San Felipe de Neri which faces the Plaza on its north side. This house of worship has been in almost continuous use for over 300 years.

Indian Pueblo Cultural Center – 2401 12th St. NW

The Indian Pueblo Cultural Center is operated as a non-profit organization by the 10 pueblos of New Mexico and is a fine place to begin exploration of Native American culture. It is a mile northeast of Old Town and is modeled after Pueblo Bonito, the spectacular 9th century ruin in Chaco Culture National Historic Park.

The permanent exhibit is in the basement and depicts the evolution from prehistory to the present of the various pueblos, including displays of the distinctive handcrafts of each community. Especially well done are the differences in pottery from pueblo to pueblo.
